

Moral Injury Experiences in Frontline Healthcare Environments

We are looking for research participants whose experiences in frontline healthcare environments have caused instances of Moral Injury

Participating in this study will involve completing a series of questionnaires online and taking part in a <1 hour interview with the primary researcher

If you are interested and would like to know more about the study, please contact Patrick Johnson, DPhil Student, at the Oxford Centre for Clinical Psychology Training and Research by emailing patrick.johnson@stx.ox.ac.uk or by scanning the QR code. You are under no obligation to take part and questions are welcomed.

Scan the QR code for more information

If you:

- Are aged 18 or above
 - Are / have been a healthcare worker in a patient-facing role
 - Affected by Moral Injury
- We would be very grateful for your interest

Ethics
Approval
Reference:
R92873/RE001

